

A Documented Pattern: the record vs. the deflection

Across more than twelve months, Christopher Hanson repeatedly narrowed this case to the one issue that controls it — court-ordered discovery — and asked, in good faith, for clear answers. Scott Davis (and, at two key moments, the court) deflected the same way each time: refuse to engage, recast Hanson's documented accuracy as a 'distorted reality' requiring a psychological evaluation, accuse Hanson of 'delay,' or go silent. In all of it, Davis never once identifies a single false statement.

 HANSON	narrowing to the facts and to the discovery issue — in good faith
 DAVIS	deflects: refuses to engage, recasts, threatens, or goes silent
 THE COURT	discovery resolved against Hanson — off the record
 THE POINT	what the exchange shows, and the delay inversion

How to read these: each exhibit places Hanson's own words beside the response they drew. All bold language is verbatim from the emails and filings. “...” marks omitted text; [bracketed] text is editorial summary, not a quote. Two exhibits are tagged COURT HANDLING · APPELLATE — the points at which discovery was decided against Hanson with no record made.

THE DELAY INVERSION: Davis repeatedly cast Hanson as the cause of 'delay.' The record shows the reverse — the only thing Hanson ever resisted was Davis's obstruction of, and distraction from, the discovery issue.

“Narrow the issues” — and an offer to void the agreement for discovery — met with refusal

Through mid-December 2024, Hanson tried to narrow the case to the one thing that mattered — court-ordered discovery — and even offered to give up the marital agreement to get it. Davis would not engage.

HANSON — narrowing to the discovery issue

Dec. 16, 2024 — 8:17 AM

We may be able to narrow the issues for what Judge Ayers needs to address . [Hanson asks for mediation dates, the Sarah and Sorgie deposition dates, and that Davis withdraw the discovery objections.]

Dec. 17, 2024 — 7:12 AM

Please confirm for me that Mrs. Hanson is agreeable to withdrawing all discovery objections in exchange for me agreeing that the marital agreement is null and void If not, please provide some explanation ... Mrs. Hanson would be confirming her desire to have more litigation and expense and less money from the divorce if she continues to object.

DAVIS — refuses to engage; reframes Hanson as the problem

Dec. 17, 2024 — 7:45 AM

What I will no longer ‘allow’ is your ongoing attempts to control the narrative regarding this issue. ... I do not owe you any ‘explanations’ for anything. You are an experienced attorney and respectfully, you should know better. ... I will need to address your volume of emails with the Court during the case management conference on Thursday.

Hanson asked only for what the discovery rules already required, and offered to surrender the marital agreement to resolve the dispute. Davis answered none of it — he refused to explain, recast Hanson’s requests as “controlling the narrative,” and pre-positioned a complaint about Hanson’s “volume of emails.”

DELAY INVERSION: The emails Davis asked the Court to curb were Hanson’s specific efforts to move discovery forward. The only thing Hanson ever “delayed” was Davis’s obstruction of the discovery issue.

Discovery denied by email — citing the agreements — with no record made

On the same morning Hanson was pressing to move discovery forward, the court disposed of his non-party discovery by email — and declined to make a record of it.

HANSON — asking only to preserve a record

Dec. 16, 2024 — 9:36 AM

But I can bring a court reporter to the zoom if I want a record , right?

Dec. 16, 2024 — 9:49 AM

Does the Judge have a way of creating a record or do I need to arrange for a court reporter to be there?

THE COURT — Judge Ayers, by judicial assistant

Dec. 16, 2024 — 9:30 AM

The Court SUSTAINS Wife's Amended Objection to Notices of Production from Non-Party (Doc 30) as the parties entered into a Premarital Agreement and Marital Separation Agreement . The subpoenas shall not be issued to the Non-Party.

Dec. 16, 2024 — 9:55 AM

Judge Ayers will not be creating a record for this matter.

Hanson's non-party discovery was denied in a one-line email — on the ground that the parties had signed the very agreements Hanson had offered to void to obtain that discovery — and the court refused to make a record. This is the appellate problem in miniature: a discovery-dispositive ruling, off the record, resting on the agreements.

“I do not owe you an explanation” — and a hearing that proceeded off the record

Hanson asked Davis to state the legal basis for his confidentiality claims, and to explain how Davis came to be excused from a hearing Hanson was required to attend. Davis refused both.

HANSON — asking for the basis, and for a record

Jan. 8, 2025

please let me know precisely what you believe is confidential and the legal basis for that position ASAP. It's my understanding that all filings are public record.

Jan. 9-10, 2025

How did Mr. Davis learn that he did not have to attend the hearing today? ... Were you ever excused by the Court ... other than you telling the Court you didn't want to attend? ... I have a concern about the way the hearing progressed yesterday and need to file something for appellate purposes .

DAVIS — refuses; warns of “detriment”

Jan. 8, 2025 — 7:02 PM

I do not owe you an explanation about anything unless I am ordered to do so. ... You can assume whatever you wish; however, that may ultimately be to your detriment. [... suggests Hanson “secure new counsel.”]

Jan. 8, 2025 — 6:37 PM

These accusations ... are patently false. That said, I will not dignify them with any further response.

Asked for the legal basis of his position, Davis answered that he owes no explanation — and warned of Hanson's “detriment.” Asked how he was excused from a hearing Hanson had to attend, he didn't say. A discovery-adjacent hearing went forward with one party excused by email and no record — exactly what Hanson flagged for appeal.

COURT HANDLING: one party excused off the record; the other required to appear — on an issue that bore directly on discovery.

“Answer the questions, or I’ll assume there are no good answers” — met with a threat

After a brief cordial exchange, Hanson again asked Davis to answer specific questions and produce records. Davis personalized the dispute and promised court.

HANSON — asking, again, for answers

Jan. 31, 2025 — 5:18 PM

This email is yet another effort to get some clear answers ... I’ve asked some critically important questions ... At least answer the questions below or I’ll have to assume there are no good answers, and the obvious explanation is the correct one.

DAVIS — refuses; threatens court

Jan. 31, 2025 — 5:39 PM

I am a grown man and I can take anything you try to throw at me. I will not withdraw from representing Ms. Hanson because you think you can bully me. You cannot. The Court can decide all the issues since it’s your way or nothing at all. ... I’ll see you in court next month.

Hanson asked for answers and warned he would otherwise draw the obvious inference. Davis offered no answers — only that he would not withdraw and would “see you in court.” Refuse to engage → threaten.

Asked to back up his allegations or admit error, Davis calls it an “inability to grasp reality” — and demands a psych eval

Hanson asked Davis to substantiate the allegations he had made, or simply acknowledge if he was mistaken. Davis recast that request as mental incapacity.

HANSON — “if you were mistaken, simply acknowledge it”

Feb. 7, 2025 — 8:52 AM

There’s at least a couple of times where you’ve thrown out allegations ... Please send that over so we can get on the same page ... If you were mistaken, please simply acknowledge it so I know that you understand the facts.

DAVIS — recasts accuracy as illness

Feb. 7, 2025 — 11:08 AM

I do not owe you any explanations or answers unless I am required to do so. ... your inability to grasp reality in this matter is precisely the reason why I believe the Court should grant Wife’s Motion for Psychological Evaluation of Husband.

Hanson asked Davis to substantiate his accusations or admit a mistake. Davis identified no fact — instead he converted Hanson’s request for accuracy into evidence of a psychological problem and a basis for a court-ordered evaluation. This is the core move: accuracy recast as illness.

Sources — Hanson email 2/7/2025 8:52 AM; Davis email 2/7/2025 11:08 AM. Case No. 24-DR-001150. Quoted language is verbatim.

Asking discovery questions at the hearing is recast as “drag, stall, and delay” — and as avoiding the psych eval

At the April 4, 2025 hearing, Hanson used his time to question the witness about the discovery he had sought for months. Davis characterized that as delay and as a refusal to address Hanson’s “mental health condition.”

HANSON — pressing the unrefuted discovery

Apr. 10, 2025 — 9:20 AM on my 3rd RTP, there was no response, nor objection, and I believe you even mentioned on the record at the deposition that the material requested is discoverable. Please provide me with [it].

DAVIS — calls discovery questions “delay”

Apr. 10, 2025

Contrary to your statement, it appears to me that you are absolutely trying to delay the litigation. ... you insisted on asking Sarah questions regarding discovery rather than ... refute her testimony related to your children and your mental health condition. ... it was crystal clear ... you were doing everything in your power to drag, stall, and delay ... why insist on asking question after question ... unrelated to ... the requested psychological evaluation?

Hanson used his hearing time on the discovery he’d sought for months — discovery Davis had conceded on the record was discoverable. Davis called that “drag, stall, and delay” and faulted Hanson for not addressing “your mental health condition” instead.

DELAY INVERSION: In Davis’s own words, Hanson’s pursuit of admittedly-discoverable material is the “delay” — and the cure he proposes is that Hanson stop asking about discovery and submit to a psychological evaluation.

“I’m no longer interested in your false narrative” — the blanket denial, then silence

Hanson kept his “sole focus” on discovery and urged cooperation. Davis declared Hanson’s entire account a “false narrative,” refused to keep responding, and pointed to court.

HANSON — “my sole focus remains this discovery”

May 2025

... my sole focus remains this discovery and I’d encourage you to try cooperation and see how that allows the case to proceed. [Hanson also notes “the prior threat you’ve made with the bat.”]

DAVIS — blanket denial, then go silent

May 11, 2025 — 5:37 PM

I’m no longer interested in your false narrative and ... will no longer respond to same. I’m not hiding from anything. Do what you need to do and file what you need to file. I will see you in court.

May 9, 2025 — 6:51 PM

... this is why I will not speak with you over the telephone.

Hanson narrowed everything to discovery and asked for cooperation. Davis labeled the whole account a “false narrative,” announced he would “no longer respond,” and again invoked court — the go-silent terminus. He identified nothing in the “narrative” as actually false.

A blanket denial “without exception” — that names no false statement — backed by a defamation threat

After Hanson published a documented account and repeatedly asked Davis to identify any false statement, Davis sent a cease-and-desist denying everything and threatening suit — while admitting discovery was “withheld or delayed” under the agreements.

HANSON — “name one”

Nov.-Dec. 2025

[Hanson published “Foxes Guarding the Courthouse...” and supporting posts documenting the discovery dispute, and asked Davis to identify any false statement.]
His repeated challenge: “Name one.”

DAVIS — denies everything, specifies nothing

Nov. 24, 2025

I deny each and every one of your allegations, without exception, reservation, or qualification. ... You have fabricated motives, invented conspiracies, and constructed a fictional narrative ...

Nov. 24, 2025

The only factual circumstance you reference that contains even a grain of truth is that certain discovery was withheld or delayed pursuant to a valid court order and consistent with the prenuptial and postnuptial agreements.

Davis denied “each and every” allegation “without exception” — yet identified not one false statement. In the same letter he conceded the core fact: discovery “was withheld or delayed ... consistent with the ... agreements.” The denial is total; the specifics are none; and the one admitted fact is the very thing Hanson has said all along.

THE TELL: A defamation threat “without exception” that cannot name a single falsehood — paired with an admission that discovery was withheld — is the whole pattern in one letter.
