MATTHEW FELIX; and MIKE MOORE,

Defendants.

PLAINTIFF'S VERIFIED MOTION TO DISQUALIFY THE HONORABLE SHERWOOD S. COLEMAN

Plaintiff, Christopher Hanson — a member of The Florida Bar (No. 44094) appearing pro se — moves under Fla. R. Gen. Prac. & Jud. Admin. 2.330 and the Code of Judicial Conduct to disqualify the presiding judge, the Honorable Sherwood S. Coleman (Sixth Judicial Circuit, sitting on this matter by assignment of the Supreme Court of Florida), and states:

INTRODUCTION

1. This is an expedited public-records mandamus action to compel disclosure of records of the judicial branch — records of the Thirteenth Judicial Circuit and its judges, who are the Defendants here. The right of access is constitutional. Art. I, § 24(a), Fla. Const., guarantees access to the records of the "legislative, executive, and judicial branches of government." Access to judicial-branch records is administered through Fla. R. Gen. Prac. & Jud. Admin. 2.420, under which "[t]he public has access to all records of the judicial branch of government, except as provided below." Rule 2.420(a). Because the records sought are judicial-branch records, the access right and the Court's duties arise under the Constitution and Rule 2.420, and do not depend on Chapter 119 — which does not reach the judiciary. See Times Publishing Co. v. Ake, 660 So. 2d 255, 257 (Fla. 1995) (the judicial branch is "an arm of the judicial branch" subject to the Supreme Court's rules "rather than the legislative branch," so "chapter 119 does not apply" and access "is governed exclusively by" the Court's public-access rule, now Rule 2.420). To the extent the Defendants have proceeded as though Chapter 119 governs, its "immediate hearing" command only reinforces the urgency the Constitution and Rule 2.420 independently require. § 119.11(1), Fla. Stat.
2. This motion is necessary because, on this record, the presiding judge has declined to perform the plain duties of his office in this expedited proceeding — the duty to issue the writ once an un rebutted prima facie case is shown, and the duty to identify any lawful basis for withholding judicial records — and has done so in a way that would place a reasonably prudent litigant in a well-grounded fear that the Court cannot impartially adjudicate a case whose very subject is misconduct within the Thirteenth Judicial Circuit. The Defendants pleaded no exemption, filed no privilege log, and designated nothing confidential; there is thus no triable issue and no lawful basis to withhold. Yet the Court vacated the existing writ in its entirety, refused — across two hearings and in a signed order — to identify a single disputed fact or exemption, declared "the case is not over," and — rather than rule — set yet another motion hearing, still with no writ entered. Plaintiff submits, as an inference he expressly labels as an inference, that a reasonable person could fear this persistent non-decision serves to shield the institution and the judges whose records are sought — what Plaintiff repeatedly warned, on the record and contemporaneously, was "insider protectionism."

3. To be clear about what this motion is not. It does not rest on adverse rulings, on legal error, or on delay as such; the remedy for an erroneous or withheld ruling is appellate or extraordinary-writ review, and Plaintiff does not ask this Court to declare any ruling wrong. The motion rests on the narrow, recognized ground that the record — drawn almost entirely from the Court's own words, in its own signed orders and on its own transcript — establishes an objectively well-grounded fear that the Court has prejudged the dispositive question and signaled a fixed predisposition, and has assumed, in one instance, an advocate-like posture benefiting only the Defendants. The delay and non-decision are recited not as freestanding grounds but as objective evidence of that prejudgment and predisposition.

4. This is an initial motion directed to Judge Coleman; no prior motion to disqualify him has been filed. It is therefore measured by the legal sufficiency of the facts alleged, taken as true. Fla. R. Gen. Prac. & Jud. Admin. 2.330. To the extent the Court were to treat the motion as governed by the successive-motion provision of Rule 2.330(i) (because a predecessor specially-assigned judge was earlier disqualified), the result is the same, for the reasons stated in Part IV — Plaintiff does not concede that subdivision (i) controls.

THE GROUNDS — STATEMENT OF SPECIFIC FACTS

Quotations are to the printed transcript pagination and were confirmed against the rendered page images on 2026-06-15. Quotations marked were not among those confirmed and must be verified before this motion is sworn.

A. The duty was clear and there was nothing to try: a prima facie case existed and the Defendants asserted no exemption

5. Before Judge Coleman was assigned, Judge Frayman had entered an alternative writ of mandamus (on or about January 13, 2026) reflecting a threshold determination and directing the Defendants to respond. Under controlling law, that is what the rule requires: "If the complaint shows a prima facie case for relief, a trial court must issue an alternative writ of mandamus," and "[o]nce an alternative writ has issued, the burden is on the respondent to come forth with facts upon which it refused to perform its legal duty." Smith v. State, 696 So. 2d 814, 815 (Fla. 2d DCA 1997); accord Conner v. Mid-Florida Growers, Inc., 541 So. 2d 1252, 1256 (Fla. 2d DCA 1989); Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.630(d). Issuance is not discretionary once a prima facie case is shown.

6. The Defendants never carried — never even attempted — that burden. They identified no statutory exemption, filed no privilege log, and designated no record as confidential, even though Rule 2.420 makes access the default and requires a party seeking confidentiality to move in writing and the court to enter findings that any restriction is "no broader than necessary." Fla. R. Gen. Prac. & Jud. Admin. 2.420. Plaintiff stated this on the record without contradiction:

"There are no exemptions that have been asserted and proven with respect to any records. There needs to be a comprehensive order that grants the relief requested in my Petitions for Writ of Mandamus." (Tr. 2/6/26 (Doc 066), P40:1–6 (Mr. Hanson).)

"They haven't tagged anything as confidential. They haven't reference[d] judicial immunity, which has no application in mandamus cases. ... [T]hey're located and have responsive records, so there's no issue. There is no mystery." (Tr. 2/6/26 (Doc 066), P34:8–15 (Mr. Hanson).)

"They've never done a privilege log in this case. ... The failure to do a privilege log is waiver of that privilege." (Tr. 4/13/26, P24:19–22 (Mr. Hanson).)

7. The records sought would, if produced, bear on alleged misconduct within the Thirteenth Judicial Circuit — including records held by the Circuit's own custodian and conduct of its own judges, one of whom (Judge Felix) is a named Defendant. That context matters to the objective analysis below: it is the backdrop against which a reasonable litigant evaluates the Court's persistent refusal to perform the ministerial duty to issue the writ or to name any basis for withholding.

B. February 6, 2026 — the sua sponte, one-directional vacatur, and Plaintiff's contemporaneous warning of insider protectionism

8. On February 6, 2026, Judge Coleman heard Plaintiff's motion for immediate relief and reconsideration. The Court confirmed it presides by Supreme Court assignment. (Tr. 2/6/26 (Doc 066), P3:8–10.)
9. Plaintiff asked the Court to vacate only the unlawful portion of Judge Frayman's order and to preserve the portion finding a prima facie case and directing production — not to vacate the favorable portion:

"You can vacate the order in parts. ... I'm not sure I understand the basis of the idea that you wouldn't be able to simply vacate the parts of the order that are unlawful, but keep the other parts moving." (Tr. 2/6/26 (Doc 066), P33:3–9 (Mr. Hanson).)

10. The Court recognized that this was Plaintiff's request:

"Oh, so you want to keep what you liked, but if he disagreed with you, you want The Court to disregard it?" (Tr. 2/6/26 (Doc 066), P68:5–9.)

11. Instead of preserving the prima-facie/production portion, the Court — without any request to do so — vacated the writ "in its entirety" and issued nothing in its place:

"The Court will grant the motion in part and vacate the January 13th alternative writ of mandamus issued by Judge Frayman in its entirety." (Tr. 2/6/26 (Doc 066), P70:8–11.)

12. The sole beneficiaries of vacating the writ "in its entirety" were the Defendants, who regained a fresh response runway in a proceeding the Constitution and Rule 2.420 (and § 119.11(1)) require to move with urgency. Counsel for the judicial Defendants conceded on the same record that the writ ordinarily issues first:

"[T]he normal course would be for the writ to be issued, and then for the time to respond to start then after The Court were to determine if there were a prima facie case." (Tr. 2/6/26 (Doc 066), P58:11–59:3 (Ms. Schwieterman).)

13. When Plaintiff asked the Court, point-blank, to identify what was lacking in the prima facie case, the Court declined to state any basis and deferred everything to a future order — and Plaintiff predicted, on the record, exactly what would follow:

MR. HANSON: "What is The Court's basis for not finding a prima facie case today? I'm a citizen. There is a presumption that I get records. Records exist." ...

THE COURT: "Mr. Hanson, I've granted your motion in part, and I'm going to discharge my responsibility under —"

MR. HANSON: "You're going to delay and protect the insiders" (Tr. 2/6/26 (Doc 066), P74:5–17.)

THE COURT: "I will endeavor to complete an order promptly and simultaneously engage in the prima facie review I've described ... And once that is completed, The Court will issue appropriate orders and rulings based on its assessment of ... whether that threshold has been met." (Tr. 2/6/26 (Doc 066), P72:2–8.)

14. Plaintiff's warning was not isolated; throughout the February 6 hearing he placed on the record his concern that the institution was protecting its own:

"[T]he systemic insider protectionism that this entire case exemplifies throughout." (Tr. 2/6/26 (Doc 066), P9:17–20 (Mr. Hanson).)

"Everything else is delays, bias, insider systemic protectionism motivated." (Tr. 2/6/26 (Doc 066), P14:18–21 (Mr. Hanson).)

"The Court is hiding them because it's embarrassing for them and it shows misconduct." (Tr. 2/6/26 (Doc 066), P55:18–25 (Mr. Hanson).)

"The judiciary in Florida is self-regulated. ... [T]he manner in which the 13th Circuit and The Florida Bar have ... fought transparency when there's extensive underlying evidence of the misconduct that the request for public records seeks to expose ... looks really, really bad." (Tr. 2/6/26 (Doc 066), P61:17–62:3 (Mr. Hanson).)

C. April 13, 2026 — the merits prejudged, a refusal to identify any disputed fact, and an accusation the Court would not substantiate

15. On April 13, 2026, at the hearing on the Defendants' motion for a protective order to stay discovery, the Court declared the merits posture before any final hearing or evaluation of a return:

"Mr. Hanson, I appreciate that you think the case is over. The case is not over." (Tr. 4/13/26, P36:12–13.)

16. Asked to identify a single disputed material fact or exemption justifying a fact hearing, the Court refused, repeatedly:

MR. HANSON: "Can the court tell me any place where they've raised any issue of material fact about any exemption?"

THE COURT: "Mr. Hanson, I'm not here to conduct a lecture or a lesson and tell you how to litigate and evaluate the evidence. We're not at that stage ..." (Tr. 4/13/26, P45:14–20.)

THE COURT: "Not a motion for the court to explain to Mr. Hanson, his satisfaction, what things are still at issue in this case." (Tr. 4/13/26, P39:25–40:3.)

17. The Court charged Plaintiff with having been historically "wrong on the law," and — when challenged — pointed vaguely to its own past orders rather than to any instance:

THE COURT: "At past times, you have not been correct on the law. So you'll forgive the court if the court doesn't simply do it because you said so ..."

MR. HANSON: "Excuse me. When was I wrong on the law?"

THE COURT: "Mr. Hanson, you could probably go back and read over my orders and find those, but." (Tr. 4/13/26, P30:7–17.)

18. The Court never identified a single example. Plaintiff immediately asked the Court to support the accusation ("I haven't seen anything where I've been wrong in the law and I'd ask for you to support that statement," Tr. 4/13/26, P30:18–21), and asked again later what he was "missing" — and the Court, across the entire hearing and in every order since, never named one instance in which Plaintiff was wrong on the law. An adverse character finding leveled against a litigant, repeated as a reason to discount his positions, yet left wholly unsubstantiated when directly challenged, is an objective indicator of a fixed predisposition rather than a judgment formed from the record.

19.The Court also declined to reach Plaintiff's cross-noticed motion for a peremptory writ at all:

"[I'm] not going to be taking up the matters cross-noticed under the motion for summary final order that you have filed with the court on this date. It can be scheduled in the future as appropriate when necessary." (Tr. 4/13/26, P14:25–15:5.)

20.As on February 6, Plaintiff warned on the record that the only function served by continued deferral was institutional self-protection:

"The only benefit served by delaying this further is to protect insiders at the Thirteenth Circuit. There's no facts or law on that side." (Tr. 4/13/26, P28:7–10 (Mr. Hanson).)

"[D]espite the fact that the court can't cite any fact or law that supports its opinion, it's just going to push it back to protect insiders." (Tr. 4/13/26, P42:12–14 (Mr. Hanson).)

D. The May 2026 order (Doc 81) — the "ultimatum," the disclaimer of any duty to identify a disputed fact, the threat to act unilaterally, and the Rule 1.510 recharacterization

Doc 81 is filing-stamped May 12, 2026; its signature line reads "____ day of May, 2026." This draft refers to it as the "May 12, 2026 order." Confirm the operative date before filing.

21.In its order of May 12, 2026 (Doc 81), the Court put the predisposition in its own writing. After Plaintiff stated he would provide hearing dates once the Court identified the material facts said to be in dispute, the Court wrote:

"The Court rejects Plaintiff's ultimatum. It is the parties' responsibility to identify the disputed facts of any case, not the Court's. ... Failure to comply with the Court's Order will result in the Court unilaterally setting the final evidentiary hearing." (Doc 81.)

22. In the same order, the Court recharacterized Plaintiff's peremptory-writ motions as Rule 1.510 summary-judgment motions and imported Rule 1.510's timing into a constitutionally and statutorily expedited proceeding:

"Although improperly titled, the motions appear to seek summary disposition under Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.510. ... Defendants' response deadline is no later than 40 days after service of the motion for summary judgment." (Doc 81.)

23. And it restricted Plaintiff's communications with chambers: "Email communications must be limited to scheduling matters only." (Doc 81.)

24. The combination is what matters: the Court committed to a fact hearing, disclaimed any duty to identify the fact requiring it, characterized Plaintiff's request that it do so as an "ultimatum" it "rejects," threatened to set the hearing "unilaterally," and recast the writ motions into a vehicle carrying 40-plus additional days of delay — all in a proceeding Plaintiff had repeatedly warned was being nullified by delay.

E. Plaintiff's repeated notice that delay nullifies the expedited right

25. Plaintiff repeatedly placed the Court on notice that continued delay defeats the constitutional access right. For example, in Doc 78 Plaintiff wrote:

"Delay caused by the custodian's refusal to identify withheld records is itself a denial of access. Allowing that posture to continue would nullify both the constitutional right of access in Article I, Section 24 and the 'immediate hearing' mandate of § 119.11(1)."

F. May 27, 2026 (Doc 84) — Plaintiff narrowed to the writ alone; still no ruling

26. On May 27, 2026, Plaintiff withdrew the summary-final-order vehicle and elected to stand exclusively on his motion for a peremptory writ (and sanctions), asking the Court to "immediately enter the Peremptory Writ of Mandamus as demanded in Docket 78." Even with a clean, narrowed, writ-only request before it, the Court did not rule.

G. June 2026 — the Court again declines to rule, setting a further motion hearing instead of issuing the writ

27. The pattern continued into June 2026. The only matter the Court had set was a hearing on June 15, 2026 — not a final evidentiary hearing on the merits, but a hearing on Plaintiff's already-filed motion for rehearing and clarification. The Court could have discharged its duty by ruling on the un rebutted prima facie case, or by identifying any fact it believed required a hearing; instead it adhered to its course of deferral, treating yet another motion hearing as the next step. There was no reason not to issue the writ or to identify the supposedly disputed facts; the insistence on a further motion hearing in their place was one more mechanism of delay. As of this filing, after months of this pattern, Plaintiff remains without any ruling on a constitutionally expedited access right, without a writ, and without a single disputed material fact or exemption ever identified, despite his repeated, on-the-record requests that the Court name one.

MEMORANDUM OF LAW

I. The governing standard

28. A motion to disqualify is judged by an objective, litigant-focused test: the facts alleged, taken as true, need only show a well-grounded fear that the movant will not receive a fair and impartial hearing. MacKenzie v. Super Kids Bargain Store, Inc., 565 So. 2d 1332, 1334–35 (Fla. 1990); Livingston v. State, 441 So. 2d 1083, 1086 (Fla. 1983). "The question of disqualification focuses on those matters from which a litigant may reasonably question a judge's impartiality rather than the judge's perception of his ability to act fairly and impartially." Livingston, 441 So. 2d at 1086. Every litigant is entitled to "nothing less than the cold neutrality of an impartial judge." State ex rel. Mickler v. Rowe, 131 So. 331, 332 (Fla. 1930).

29. Because this is an initial motion as to Judge Coleman, the Court "may determine only the legal sufficiency of the motion and shall not pass on the truth of the facts alleged." Fla. R. Gen. Prac. & Jud. Admin. 2.330. Adverse rulings, legal error, and ordinary case management are not grounds for disqualification, and Plaintiff does not contend otherwise.

II. Prejudgment and a fixed predisposition are recognized grounds

30. A judge "may form mental impressions and opinions during the course of presentation of evidence, as long as she does not prejudge the case." Wargo v. Wargo, 669 So. 2d 1123, 1124–25 (Fla. 4th DCA 1996) (quoting Brown v. Pate, 577 So. 2d 645, 647 (Fla. 1st DCA 1991)). Disqualification is required where the judge's statements "signaled a predisposition, rather than an impression formed after reviewing the evidence," or reflect an unwillingness to afford the litigant a meaningful opportunity to be heard. Id. at 1125; Peterson v. Asklepious, 833 So. 2d 262, 264 (Fla. 4th DCA 2002) (granting prohibition where the judge's comments and refusal to hear the party gave a "well founded fear" of an unfair tribunal). And a judge who, in resisting disqualification, looks past legal sufficiency to refute the charges "on that basis alone established grounds for his disqualification." Bundy v. Rudd, 366 So. 2d 440, 442 (Fla. 1978); see also Fischer v. Knuck, 497 So. 2d 240 (Fla. 1986).

III. Application — a fixed predisposition, a one-directional vacatur, and a refusal to perform the duty that a reasonable litigant could attribute to institutional self-protection

31.Prejudgment / fixed predisposition. Across the February 6 and April 13 hearings and in the May 12 order, the Court held a fixed conclusion — that triable issues exist, that a fact hearing is required, and that the writ would not issue — while refusing, every time it was asked, to identify a single disputed material fact or exemption. It declared "the case is not over" (§ 15); it charged Plaintiff with being "not ... correct on the law" and, when challenged, never identified one instance (§§ 17–18); and it "reject[ed] Plaintiff's ultimatum" while disclaiming any duty to name the disputed fact (§§ 21, 24). A conclusion maintained without any articulable basis, repeated from the bench and in writing in the face of direct questions, "signal[s] a predisposition." Wargo, 669 So. 2d at 1125.

32.One-directional vacatur. The Court, sua sponte, vacated the existing alternative writ "in its entirety" — relief Plaintiff did not seek and expressly asked the Court to preserve in part — and issued nothing in its place, conferring on the Defendants alone a renewed response window in an expedited proceeding (§§ 9–12). The Court's own framing ("you want to keep what you liked ...") and opposing counsel's concession that the writ ordinarily issues first (§ 12) confirm that the deferral was the Court's own choice, not a course the law compelled. A reasonably prudent litigant could fear the Court has assumed an advocate-like posture for the only adversaries in the room.

33.Refusal to perform the duty, against a backdrop of institutional self-interest. The duty here was not discretionary: on an unrebutted prima facie case the Court "must issue an alternative writ." Smith, 696 So. 2d at 815. The Defendants pleaded no exemption, filed no privilege log, and designated nothing confidential (§ 6); there was, on this record, nothing to try. Yet the Court vacated the writ, declined to find a prima facie case "today," recast the matter into a 40-day summary-judgment track, and set a further motion hearing rather than rule, still with no writ entered (§§ 11, 13, 22, 27). Plaintiff does not ask this Court to declare those steps legally erroneous — that is for another tribunal. The point is narrower and objective: where the records sought would expose alleged misconduct within the very Circuit and judiciary to which the presiding judge belongs (and one of whose judges is a Defendant), a reasonably prudent litigant, watching the Court refuse for months to perform a ministerial duty or to name any reason for withholding, would hold a well-grounded fear that the proceeding is being managed to protect insiders rather than to decide the case. Plaintiff is not required to prove the Court's subjective motive; he is required only to show that the objective record supports that fear — and here he voiced precisely that fear, contemporaneously and repeatedly, on the record (¶¶ 13–14, 20).

Plaintiff acknowledges that the record also contains statements by the Court disclaiming deference to the Defendants, affirming Plaintiff's right to be heard, and granting Plaintiff relief in part. Those statements are weighed in the objective analysis. They do not dispel the fear that arises from the Court's repeated refusal to identify any disputed fact or exemption while committing to a fact hearing, from the unrequested one-directional vacatur, and from the adversarial framing of the May 12 order, because the test is not the Court's stated intentions but the well-grounded fear a reasonable litigant would hold on this record. Livingston, 441 So. 2d at 1086.

IV. The successive-motion provision does not defeat this motion

34. This is an initial motion as to Judge Coleman and is therefore measured by legal sufficiency alone (Part I). Plaintiff does not concede that the successive-motion provision, Fla. R. Gen. Prac. & Jud. Admin. 2.330(i), applies merely because a predecessor specially-assigned judge was earlier disqualified; the conduct at issue is Judge Coleman's own, occurring after his assignment, and could not have been raised before.

35. Even if subdivision (i) were applied, the result is unchanged. Every operative fact is the Court's own statement — the vacatur "in its entirety," the refusal to identify any disputed fact or exemption, "the case is not over," the unsubstantiated "wrong on the law" charge, the "ultimatum" language and threat to act "unilaterally," and the Rule 1.510 recharacterization. A court cannot refute its own signed orders and its own transcript, and subdivision (i)'s standard cannot be satisfied on a record that forecloses any sustainable determination of impartiality.

V. Timeliness

36. This motion is timely. Under Fla. R. Gen. Prac. & Jud. Admin. 2.330(g), a motion to disqualify must be filed within a reasonable time not to exceed 20 days after discovery of the facts constituting the grounds. The Court's prejudgment and predisposition have been confirmed continuously through the present, and most recently on or about June 12, 2026, when — with no writ entered and no disputed fact or exemption identified — the Court adhered to its course of deferral by proceeding toward a further motion hearing rather than ruling. This motion is filed within 20 days of that confirmation (on or before July 2, 2026). The earlier facts (the February 6 and April 13 hearings and the May 12 order) are pleaded as context.

RELIEF REQUESTED

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff respectfully requests that the Court:

- a. Determine this motion under the legal-sufficiency standard applicable to an initial motion to disqualify, or, in the alternative and without Plaintiff's concession that it applies, under Fla. R. Gen. Prac. & Jud. Admin. 2.330(i);
- b. Enter an order of disqualification and proceed no further in this action; and
- c. Direct that the matter be reassigned to a successor judge, and grant such other relief as is just.

Respectfully submitted,
